PROCLAMATION - NATIONAL COIN WEEK GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY

April 21-27, 1974

NATIONAL COIN WEEK was first observed in 1924 by the American Numismatic Association. It has been an annual event since then, and now is celebrated by thousands of ardent numismatists and numismatic organizations.

It is one of the outstanding programs of the American Numismatic Association and its 39,000 members, with a constantly increasing membership.

The purposes and reasons for this special week are to advance the cultural and artistic aspects of coin collecting, to advance the enjoyment of the hobby through proper education, to advance the interest in coin collecting as a science, and to attract new collectors who will enjoy the hobby and educate them to the study of history, economics and art through coin collecting.

I therefore proclaim April 21st through the 27th, 1974, National Coin Week and commend the American Numismatic Association for its outstanding work and National Coin Week upon reaching its Golden Anniversary this year.

Signed

MAYOR.

To Shore Up Popularity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is charting a fresh public relations campaign to coincide with President Nixon's responses to a pair of subpoenas from impeachment and Watergate investigators.

Presidential appearances in sections of the country considered generally friendly to his cause — and possibly a new Watergate "white paper" — are cornerstones of the effort to shore up Nixon's sagging popularity and to blunt impeachment moves.

On Thursday, the deadline for an answer to the House Judiciary Committee's subpoena for 42 tape recorded conversations, Nixon is scheduled to address a regional economic council in Jackson, Miss.

On May 3, one day after a response is due on special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski's subpoena for tapes of 63 conversations, Nixon is to make a public appearance in Phoenix, Ariz.

Although White House spokesmen won't publicly disclose the President's plans, indications are mounting that Nixon will stop short of supplying the House committee with all the subpoenaed material. One aide has said some of the conversations were never recorded and that others deal with national security matters.

According to reliable reports, the public relations campaign is intended to convince Americans that Nixon's response to the committee request is, in the words of one official, "comprehensive and conclusive."

In recent days, Nixon aides reportedly have been completing transcripts of the subpoenaed tapes and working on a lengthy document that White House officials contend will prove the President's innocence of any Watergate wrongdoing.

Whether the document will be released publicly, or merely turned over to the committee, has not been disclosed.

Meanwhile, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., told a nationwide television audience that he continued "to see reluctance, a dragging of feet, almost what might be considered a hindrance of justice" in White House failure to relinquish tapes sought by the House committee or the special prosecutor.

Percy, interviewed on ABC-TV's "Issues and Answers" program also said he would not be satisfied if Nixon turned over edited transcripts of the conversations instead of the actual tapes.

Central Arkansas Hit By Flooding

Several Families Evacuated

By The Associated Press
Heavy rain pounded Arkansas Sunday and Sunday night, causing the evacuation of several families and the closing of many highways and city streets.

The central portion of the state was hardest hit.

The National Weather Service said 7.96 inches of rain fell at Little Rock during the 24-hour period ended at 7 a.m. In addition, 6.5 inches fell at Ferndale and 6.1 inches was reported at Hot Springs.

About a dozen families in the Little Rock-North Little Rock area were evacuated because of high water. No injury was reported.

Four families were evacuated from their homes in Doddridge, about 28 miles south of Texarkana. A spokesman for the Miller County sheriff's office said there was four feet of water in one house. The spokesman said there was a great deal of water damage in the area, but no injury.

Several severe weather warnings were issued during the night and early this morning.

Showers and thunderstorms are expected to continue today — primarily in the southern and eastern portions of the state — and more flooding may result.

The Weather Service said rain should end from the west this afternoon and tonight, becoming partly cloudy and mild Tuesday.

In addition to the heavy rain, a tornado was reported at Carlisle and hail, one inch in diameter, was reported at Magnolia during the night.

Entire Golan Heights Erupting In Fighting

By The Associated Press
Artillery fire pounded strategic Mt. Hermon today and fighting erupted along the entire Golan Heights front. The Syrian command reported it was hitting Israeli anti-aircraft missile bases that were "moved up to forward positions last night."

The Syrians claimed their artillery and tanks had "inflicted heavy losses on enemy military installations, concentration points and antitank missile air raider. Egypt has refused to meet with Libya and Syria at a session of the People's Council of the Federation of Arab Republics, the Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar reported today.

No reason was given for the refusal of Egyptian members of the federation parliament to go to Libya for the meeting, but there was speculation that it was a protest against last Thursday's attack on the Military Technical Academy in Cairo. Egyptian officials have to start a major economic aid program with Egypt in coming months but indicated there are no plans to supply Egypt with arms.

Both Israeli and Syrian air forces were reported in action Sunday. The Israeli command said its planes attacked artillery and troop positions six miles behind Syrian lines after Syrian guns shelled Israeli positions on Mt. Hermon. The Israelis said the Syrians also sent one of their

Southwest Tech Projects

The electronic students at Southwest Technical Institute, have designed, built and tested projects for one of their courses. One of the high interest areas was automotive electronics. Two of the projects were an electronic ignition system and a radio control model car. In the photo at the left, Tommie Singleton of Little Rock who designed and built a radio control model automobile demonstrates his product. In the photo at the right, Robbie Ward of Strong is shown testing the ignition system with his instructor, Larry G. Owen. The electronics program at Southwest Tech provides the student with a solid foundation in electronic fundamentals, test equipment, and systems analysis and repair. (Photos by S.T.I. Art Dept.).

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

We love you, and by we, I'm including my husband and I'm not a bit jealous!

I have a good pair of shoes that only stared at me from the closet shelf every time I opened the door, because they were too large at the heels.

They kept slipping off my feet and forced me to walk with a shuffle.

Then the light flickered as I was cutting off the stretchy portion of a top of a pair of hose. I'm not talking about panty hose, I mean regular hose that cling, or the thigh-highs.

I cut this stretchy portion in half and glued it to the inside heels of my shoes with plain ordinary white household glue.

Now I'm wearing my shoes, and with such pleasure.

tins."

I do it in the electric skillet. First of all, I pour a small amount of water in the electric skillet — put a dab of butter in each pie tin and place in the skillet. Heat until butter is melted and then place one or two eggs in each tin...cover and cook to desired firmness.

The steam cooks the eggs beautifully.

A. Van Daley

Dear Heloise:

Many people save their soap slivers, when the bar gets too small to use, in an old nylon stocking. But, I wonder if they have ever thought to hang one of these stockings on an outdoor faucet?

It gives a quick clean-up before you come in after gardening and, better still, children seem to like the idea of washing their hands this way. Sure cuts down on dirty little fingerprints on the woodwork.

One Who Knows

Dear Heloise:

You may think this sounds rather strange but...

Instead of using a plain ordinary tray when serving someone (especially a child) sick in bed, I use a plastic dish pan. That's right, and I find the high, square kind is the best.

There's no worry about things slipping off the tray since the

'Gate Crasher Extraordinaire' Hobby Started 46 Years Ago

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Who is that man walking arm-in-arm with Mae West, chatting with John Lindsay, shaking hands with President Nixon, posing with Harry Truman?

It's Morris Lieberman, retired furniture salesman and gate crasher extraordinaire.

"Some men collect stamps and some men collect coins," says Lieberman, 62. "I go to parties and events and collect pictures. It's been my hobby."

Lieberman, originally from Cedarhurst, N.Y., recorded his biggest coups in New York City.

The bottle-jawed Lieberman says his hobby started accidentally in 1928 at the age of 16 when he went to hear New York Gov. Al Smith accept the Democratic presidential nomination.

By chance, Lieberman says he sat next to Smith's wife and wound up being ushered out with the Smith family by an honor guard of police. The next day, he was pictured on the front page of a local newspaper, standing proudly with the governor's family.

Lieberman refuses to disclose his gate crashing secrets, but eagerly talks about his favorite triumphs.

When former President Truman came to New York in 1956 to stump for Gov. Averell Harriman and other Democratic candidates, Lieberman joined the VIPs on the podium at a political rally.

Lieberman says Truman shook his hand and told him, "You look like a fine candidate — I'm sure you'll be successful."

In 1960, Lieberman said he grabbed a seat behind Pat Nixon on a platform in New York while then Vice President Richard Nixon made a address in his campaign for the presidency.

In another escapade, Lieberman donned a tuxedo and crashed the 1970 premier of the film "Myra Breckenridge."

As hundreds pushed and shoved for a close look at Mae West, Lieberman recalled he walked up to her limousine and said, "Mae, you look wonderful tonight."

Movie magazines in three countries later carried a picture of Lieberman escorting Miss West into the theater.

Last year, Lieberman joined in an invitation-only party for New York Mayor John V. Lindsay, who was leaving office after eight years.

Lieberman said he was talking with Lindsay when an aide leaned over and whispered in the mayor's ear, "Who the hell is that guy you're talking to?"

"I don't know who in the hell he is," Lieberman said Lindsay replied. "But I seem to run into him almost everywhere I go."

"They never know for sure who I am," Lieberman says. "They know they've seen me some place, or they think they have. Rather than risk offending someone important, they always went along and acted as though they knew me."

Mystery Ball Origin Called Brain Teaser

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An unidentified Flying Object expert says although the origin of a 22-pound stainless steel ball found in Florida remains a mystery, "it's a nice, pleasant brain teaser."

Dr. J. Allen Hynek, chairman of the Department of Astronomy at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill. and former scientists now thinks the object is other than man-made.

"None will go so far as to say its extraterrestrial," he said in an interview Sunday. "They would be putting their scientific reputations on the line."

The five scientists met here as members of a National Enquirer panel on UFOs. The

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise:

Your ideas have done much to guide me in finding the easier, more efficient way of getting things done.
